- President Ellen Johnson Sirleaf attended a prayer service at the Dominion Christian Fellowship Center of the Isaac Winker Global Ministry on Tubman Boulevard where she renewed her vow to continue to respect the rights of others. She promised not to change her characteristic of tolerance and understanding people's attitudes.

Making remarks during the service the Liberian leader promised to remain engaged with all those who mean good for the country and no amount of disrespect to the presidency will deter her from performing her constitutional duties.

The Liberia leader said despite the seriousness of the Ebola fight, there were still some elements of the Liberian society playing politics with the situation. But President Sirleaf assured the congregation that with her engagement with partners, there is now enormous international support coming to Liberia and if Liberians unite in the fight, they will soon reverse the situation.

She admonished all Liberians to continue to pray and at the same time observe all the anti-Ebola measures as released by health authorities and experts.
